Qatar, the host country for the 2022 World Cup, is therefore only participating in these first two rounds of qualifying structure is as follows:[16] First round: 12 teams (ranked 35-46) played home and away on two feet. The six winners advanced to the second round. Round 2: 40 teams (ranked 1-34) including Qatar as hosts, and 6 first-round winners) were divided into eight groups of five for round-trip matches. The winners of the eight groups and the top four will qualify for the third round of the FIFA World Cup qualifiers and qualify for the 2023 AFC Asian Cup. If Qatar wins in its group or as one of the top four in second place, the fifth best runner in second place will go into the third round instead. [4] Round 3: The 12 teams advancing from the second round will be divided into two groups of 6 teams to play back-and-forth matches. The first two teams in each group gualify for the Confederation slot, where he will play a federal team to be selected. [18] However, on 25 June 2020, following FIFA's decision to postpone the September international window due to the COVID-19 epidemic, CONCACAF noted that the current World Cup qualifying process was in jeopardy and would be changed. [19] On July 27, 2020, CONCACAF announced a new form of World Cup qualification. [20] Round 1: Concacaf teams ranked 6 to 35 based on fifa's July 2020 ranking slot were divided into six groups of five and will play one round-trip match (two on their own soil and two outside), and the winners of the group will qualify for the second round. Round 2: The winners will play in the first round of the first round in a two-run series at home. The three winners will qualify for the final. Round 3: The winners in the second round will join the top five Concacaf teams (Mexico, the United States, Costa Rica, Jamaica and Honduras[21] also based on fifa's classification in July 2020 and play back-and-forth matches in one group.
